When I entered upon my duties I found the schools weak on the side of thought work, though very good in formal work. I am not saying why this was the case or that it was not necessarily so. But again I am simply stating a fact. While our standard of literacy has long been high, and a proper occasion for pride on our part, our standard of real education was and is low. The first year of my work was devoted to general preparations for a forward step on the part of the whole teaching force. The assistance rendered in this matter by Dr. Dressier and others in the Summer School of 1896 is incalculable. In the middle of the next year a new course of study...
